Construction crews erect steel joists for the south section roof. Effort is being made to finish this upper story before the end of the first quarter.

SOUTH ROOF FINISHED IN SEPTEMBER; OTHER WORK MAKES RAPID PROGRESS

Construction progress before the opening of school continued at a rapid pace as summer deadlines came nearer. Much of the work was concentrated chiefly upon the finishing of the women's dormitories. Walls were painted and ceilings plastered on the top floor of the north section which houses nearly half the young women students.

Rooms in the old dormitory on the main floor of the south end were repainted before the furniture was moved back in. The dormitory is being used temporarily until the upper floor of that section can be finished and made ready for the girls.

The huge concrete floor slab for the south end was poured by August 25, and construction of the outside walls and erection of the steel beams to support the roof began immediately. Steel decking for the asphalt roof was laid before the middle of September and the actual roofing began soon after.

Another summer project, the painting of the Bryan Memorial Chapel, was begun early in June. After several weeks delay, the work was resumed and finished in September.

FOUR NEW TEACHERS ON PRESENT STAFF

Faculty and staff members for the 1951-52 school year, which began September 18, were announced by D. W. Ryther, executive vice-president and dean, shortly before the opening of school.

To strengthen the teaching staff and increase training facilities offered to the students, four new faculty members, William Cook Zellars, R. Rice Nutting, Kermit Zopfi, and Roger W. Walkwitz, were engaged.

Dr. Zellars, who joined the language department as associate professor of Spanish, is also teaching some classes in French. His educational attainments include a Ph.B. degree from Emory University, an M.A. from Columbia University, and a Ph.D., with a major in Spanish, from New York University. Dr. Zellars' linguistic ability also includes a speaking knowledge of German, Latin, and some Italian.

Mr. Nutting, who is assistant professor of music, is serving as private instructor in piano and organ, and class instructor for music theory. Having received his B.M. from Wheaton College, Mr. Nutting con-

From My Heart to You

As these lines are written, one week before the beginning of another school year, everyone on Bryan

Hill is tremendously busy getting ready for new and returning students. We expect the largest student body yet.

While preparing for the arrival of so many new students, one anticipates what they will be like individually, with their various objectives, ideals, and talents. We know that tremendous possibilities are involved.

A letter received from Helen Gow, one of our graduates now a missionary in the Belgian Congo, calls my mind back to the time when she was a freshman.

"Just this morning I looked again through my senior yearbook, the Commoner. As each page was turned, many precious memories flooded my mind. Then, I sat quietly with closed eyes and thought back over the years since I was a freshman. Oh, the years at Bryan were precious ones which prepared me for this field of service for our Lord. The 'farewell' to the seniors written in the Commoner ends like this: 'Trudge on, friends. There is no height He has not conquered. His strength is sufficient for you—press on, and on, and on. He will yet conquer new heights through you.'

"Sometimes a heavy fog hides from view the mountain ranges to the west. Just as surely as those fogs lift and reveal the glories behind them, we know that the veil which is between us and Christ will lift some day, and we shall see Him face to face. Until that day, may Bryan be a lighthouse for Him—shaping and molding many lives for Christ and sending them forth as torches to light many dark corners of the world."

As I sit at my desk, the many noises from various parts of the building remind me of blocks and bricks, steel windows and doors, concrete slabs, roof decking, and many other construction materials. Such letters as that from Helen Gow remind me that we are building spiritually as well as materially. I know you rejoice with me in building lives for time and eternity.

NINE FRESHMEN RECEIVE SCHOLARSHIP AWARDS

Recipients of the scholarship awards for the present school term were recently announced by D. W. Ryther, executive vice-president and dean.

David Lunney, of Port Huron, Michigan, and Joanne Simon, of Winona, Minnesota, were awarded the George E. Guille scholarship this year. The scholarship allows attendance at the university without payment of tuition for four consecutive years. Rose Marie Brown, junior of Troy, Ohio, Wilson Baroody, sophomore of Altoona, Pennsylvania, and Joeann Enyart, sophomore of Peru, Indiana, also hold the scholarship.

Freshmen receiving the two-year, tuition-free valedictory scholarship are James Bowe, St. Bernard, Ohio; Cecil Lee, Bidwell, Ohio; and Richard Mason, Lorain, Ohio. The scholarship is awarded to those students ranking scholastically first in their respective high school graduating classes. The salutatorian grant, a one-year scholarship for those ranking second in their class, was awarded to Martha Sheffield of St. Louis, Missouri.

Sophomores retaining the valedictory scholarships are Lenora Gearhart, Vinton, Virginia; Edythe Howsden, Alma, Nebraska; Betty Starring, Grandview, Tennessee; Joyce Johnson, Ft. Logan, Colorado; and Dorothy Bean, Phoenix, Arizona.

Janice Coleman, junior of Chesapeake, Ohio, is also receiving the scholarship this year; and Alton Witter, sophomore of Columbiana, Ohio, and Luman Gesford, junior of Montrose, Pennsylvania, are using the salutatorian scholarship which was held over from last year.

Winners of the two local Rhea County scholarships were Gaynell Cobble of Dayton, and Betty Houston of Spring City. The scholarships, offered to one senior from each of the two Rhea County high schools, are equal to one year's tuition.

Mary Rose Cranfill of Pikeville, Tennessee, was awarded a one-year scholarship provided by several business and professional people of Pikeville.

THE BRYAN CHAPEL: DAILY ACTIVITY CENTER

Daily chapel programs and the fall Bible Conference provide spiritual refreshment for Bryan students. Above, students are seen leaving the chapel after a morning session.

BRYAN STUDENTS TEACH CLASSES FOR CHILDREN IN DAYTON AREA HOMES

Directed by the Bryan chapter of the Child Evangelism Fellowship, of which Fred Donehoo is president, Bryan students are now conducting several classes for children in homes throughout Dayton.

Since its organization as a separate unit of the Christian Service Association, the fellowship has grown to a place of prominence in the practical work program of Bryan University. Affiliated with the CSA, the organization sent out 30 students to conduct 14 weekly classes last year. Through these services, usually held on either Sunday or Monday afternoons, almost 200 children were reached with the Gospel every week.

To help create interest in the work of the group, Child Evangelism meetings are held every other Wednesday. New ideas are often discussed or illustrated at the meetings, and several times during the year special speakers are featured. For a number of years, Mrs. O. W. Jorges, of Chattanooga has presented a Bible story on flannelgraph for those interested in the possibilities of this work.

Vice-president of the fellowship is Bessie Degerman and secretary is Leona Bair. Sponsor for the organization is Miss Ann Wildern.

UNIVERSITY INTRODUCES NEW LIBRARY COURSE

To aid new students in recognizing and in using reference books and similar sources of information, and to give them a knowledge of the card catalog and how to use it, a new one-quarter course in library science is being offered this year. All freshmen are required to take the course.

Robert Marston, university librarian and teacher of the class, which meets one hour a week, believes that it will give the students a practical working knowledge of the library, will save the students' time, and will increase the usefulness of the library.

Besides teaching the library course, Mr. Marston is continuing his program of re-cataloging all books in the library. The program, begun last year, includes classifying more than 800 books given to the library by Dr. H. A. Ironside.

Assisting Mr. Marston in the classifying work are Bessie Degerman, junior of Bemidji, Minnesota, who is catalog assistant, and Harriette Stahnke, sophomore of St. Paul, Minnesota, who is in charge of lettering the books.

During the summer months, the library reading room was redecorated. However, the facilities are inadequate for the present student body, and hopes are high that the entire library can be moved to its permanent quarters on the main floor within a few months.
